Centre for Development of Communication Skills (ENGLISH)

The IT revolution has made English the language of access to global information. It is Communication Skills in English that has a worldwide market as English has become the language of business and commerce, trade and technology, journalism and media. As a result, the pool of undergraduate students eager to learn the English language in order to use it to advance their careers has been becoming progressively more diverse in terms of regional and linguistic backgrounds, making the task of the instructor a far more complex, yet crucial one.

English Language is an effective means to effective leadership.
